Christian Academy buys 7.5 acres, building for less than half appraised value

The Anderson County Board of Education approved the sale of the old Early Childhood Center to the Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg during a special called meeting last Thursday night.

The academy submitted the only bid on the property, and purchased the 45,500 square-foot building and the 7.5 acres upon which it sits for $75,100, less than half of its $170,000 appraised value.

Mitchell

The building, which closed at the end of this school year, has been replaced with a new building near Emma B. Ward Elementary.

Steve Carmichael, the academy's headmaster, said he was thrilled with the purchase.

"We've been praying for three years for land, a building and a sports complex," said Carmichael. "It's amazing how the Lord put the pieces together to make that happen."

The academy, which is private, has around 130 students in preschool through 12th grade and utilizes facilities at Alton Baptist and Anderson Christian churches.

The purchase of the old ECC building will allow all of the academy's students to be at one location, and includes a gymnasium, cafeteria, playground and football field. It is located on Main Street next to the public library.

School Superintendent Sheila Mitchell said she was happy that the academy's bid was approved.

"They can use that facility for children continuing their journey in education, and it's a wonderful use of the childhood center," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said the school board advertised the building for sale in

Camp Calvary's mission never changes

MACKVILLE - When you turn right into the entrance to Camp Calvary, it seems like the world just knows it stays behind. It always has.

Nestled in the hills of northern Washington County, just a water balloon throw from the Anderson County line, the camp serves as a weeklong home to over a thousand kids each summer.

The only cars anyone can hear are the ones driving down the hill from the camp entrance to the main building. Occasionally, you can hear a plane flying overhead, but that's about it.

There are no radios.

No iPods. No TVs. No cell phones.

"We can still hear the cows at night," said Anderson County native Alan Cooper, who has been the camp's manager since 1989.

The kids - it's all about the kids - would have it no other way.

on tire marks, it appears the van returned to the road, but went sideways and slammed into a tree on the opposite side. The van hit the tree on the driver's side door, and Ramsey was pronounced dead at the scene.

News of his death hit his friends and county park coworkers hard. Nick Satterly, the county's parks and recreation director, said he let Ramsey and other employees take a three-hour break from their jobs, due to the excessive heat.

He said Ramsey, who was about to enter his senior year at Anderson County High School, was a dependable hard worker. Satterly said he became concerned when Ramsey didn't return to work on time.

A short while later, Satterly said he got word of Ramsey's death, leaving him with the difficult job of telling his coworkers what had happened.

"It was real hard to do," he said. "He was a good kid, and could fit right in with everyone."

"We all really enjoyed having him there because he made the days so much better."

By Monday night, about a dozen of Ramsey's friends were at the scene of the wreck, where they nailed a signed wooden cross and placed flowers on the tree his vehicle struck.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway said Ramsey was a "a fine young man" and that his death is a "tragedy."

Conway informed the Anderson County Fiscal Court of Ramsey's death during a meeting Tuesday morning.

"We lost a young man Sunday," Conway said. "He was liked by everyone he worked with, and was well received by the general public in the county park."

The wreck occurred around 2:30 p.m. about a half-mile west of Beaver Lake Road. Ramsey was pronounced dead at 3:08 p.m. by Anderson County Coroner Mark Tussey.

Tussey said the cause of Ramsey's death was blunt force trauma, and that he was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the wreck.

Tussey said there are no indications that drugs or alcohol played a role in his death.

Ramsey, a son of Gerald and Terri More Ramsey, was a member of the high school track team and attended Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church. He enjoyed his cats, hanging out with friends and playing video games, according to obituary information provided by Ritchie & Peach Funeral Home.

Services for Ramsey are scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday at the funeral home. Visitation is today (Wednesday) from 5 to 8 p.m.

it," said Anderson County teen Zach Dennis, who was spending last week in the woods taking in Field and Stream camp for boys in grades 7-12.

"The biggest thing is that kids can come here and learn about Christ and do so in a safe environment," said Bart Price, the minister of Antioch Christian Church, who was serving as the dean of Intermediate I week for kids of middle school age last week. "They come here and don't have to worry about anything except what is going on in camp."

And what is going on in camp is more than can be listed in a short article.

Last week, two sessions were going on simultaneously, with 50 boys roughing it in the wilderness for Field and Stream week while about 75 kids were sleeping in the dorms located near the main entrance.

Whether they were shooting arrows in the woods or playing water games like "tsunami," it was six days of fun, Bible classes and camp songs.

"I have seen kids hide when their parents are coming," said Cooper, who attended the camp as a child. "Coming to Camp Calvary is one of my best memories from my childhood."

Incorporated in 1960, the camp operated at Camp Bingham, a former 4-H camp in Washington County, before moving to its present site in 1963. Vernon Coulter of Willisburg donated 26 acres for the camp, which was open for five weeks in the summer.

Now, the camp operates year-round and encompasses over 400 acres. It offers 24 weeks of camp, including four sessions for special needs children. Cooper said the facility hosted 43 other events last year.

The camp is primarily supported by a large group of independent Christian Churches, including all in Anderson County. Last year, Ninevah Christian Church, where Cooper's brother, Terry, is minister, had more kids attend Camp Calvary than any other supporting church.

Corinth Christian, Fox Creek Christian and Anderson Christian churches were also in the top 10 churches in number of campers.

Cooper noted that four Baptist churches and one Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) also send campers and pay full tuition.

A member of a state runner-up basketball team at Anderson County High School in 1971, Cooper says his work at Camp Calvary is much more meaningful. "That was just stuff," he says. "This is service."

Operating the camp is not cheap and tuition is $170 for a full-week session. Some churches pay the full tuition fee, others pay a percentage. But Cooper says money will never be in the way of a child wanting to attend a week of camp.

In early June, Cooper received a call from a mission school in another state about the possibility of 10 kids attending camp, but could not pay the tuition.

"They said they had called three or four other camps but those would not take the kids," Cooper said. "I told them to send them on and we took them. That was $1,700 in scholarship money, but I know we will come up with the money somewhere."

Cooper said the camp gave $26,000 in scholarships, divided among 226 campers, last year.

"If someone can't pay, that is not the kid's fault," Cooper said. "People will call here and say, 'My husband lost his job' or 'My husband left.' I tell them they don't have to explain. We tell them to send the kids to camp."

"Some people say that some would take advantage of that, but, again, that is not the kid's fault."

Camp Calvary has changed with the times; the core is the same as in 1960.

"When the camp started, the slogan was, 'In the hills of old Kentucky, where spiritual values are stressed,'" Cooper said. "That is still our philosophy. We stress the spiritual values."

"That won't change."

late April with a notice in The Anderson News, and accepted bids for three months.

She said the school board made no other attempts to market the building or land.

Carmichael, the headmaster, said he hopes students will be able to move into the building when school opens Aug. 6, but isn't sure it will happen.

"It's all dictated by financing, closing dates, inspections ... those sorts of things," he said.

"If we can't, we would start [at our current locations] and look for the best opportunity to move into the building such as fall break, or maybe sooner."

Carmichael said the academy assembled a committee to search for a building, and submitted a bid based on what other nearby old school buildings sold for, including the old Western school, which sold in the early 2000s for $63,000.

He said real estate professional Mark Crutch-

er chaired the committee. The academy will use the newest portion of the old building, along with rooms on the other end.

"As we grow, we will move into other portions of the building," he said, adding that Regional Training Center, which rents a portion of the building, plans to stay on as a tenant.

The academy, now entering its 17th year, is expected to grow now that it has a home of its own.

Carmichael said the committee examined the effect similar purchases have had on other church-based schools.

"In each situation, enrollment went up 15-20 students the first year," he said.

The old building was declared too old for major renovations several years ago, prompting the school district to build a new ECC. The old building previously served the district as a high school and middle school.

Carmichael said the building is historic, and he plans to keep it that way.

"There is a lot of history attached," he said. "The big Anderson 'A' in the middle of the gym floor ... we want to retain that."

"We will look to have things for the community because we want to be a part of the community and are excited about being in downtown Lawrenceburg."

Distillery ups county assessment; foreclosures drive city's down

Countywide taxing districts will gain revenue without increasing tax rates

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The assessed value of real estate in the county floated a bit higher this year while assessed value in the city sank like a stone.

The city's assessed real estate value declined by $1.4 million, according to preliminary information released by Brian Stivers, the county's property value administrator.

Assessed real estate in the county went the other way, increasing by nearly $3.6 million.

Stivers said the reason for the decline within city limits is primarily due the ongoing rash of foreclosures, which drives down the value of nearby homes.

The county's increase is almost exclusively due to the ongoing expansion at Wild Turkey Distillery, which is outside city limits.

"The only thing that saved [the county] is Wild Turkey," Stivers said, who added that the sale of the distillery three years ago, coupled with last year's construction of a new distillery, has now been fully assessed.

Assessed residential property wasn't the city's only decline. Stivers said the new Burger King in front of Walmart, while not part of this year's assessed value because it wasn't completed by the Jan. 1 deadline, also played a role.

He said the assessed value

of the land on which Burger King sits was roughly $900,000, but the company that bought it paid nearly $600,000 less.

Because assessments are done in part based on comparable properties, Stivers said that sale triggered a reduction of the nearby strip plaza that houses Little Caesar's Pizza from $1.5 million to $1.2 million.

"That's $300,000 right there," he said.

Overall assessed real estate value countywide is now nearly $1.277 billion. In the city, the assessed value is just over $540 million.

Stivers said he reassesses property on a quadrennial plan, which means every property is supposed to be reassessed every four years.

He said he understands that lower total property values can result in less revenue to taxing districts such as the

What it means

A decline in the city's assessed value means that city government will receive less money if it leaves its tax rate at the current level of $1.78 per $1,000 of assessed value.

Overall, the city would realize about $2,500 less than it received last year.

Countywide districts would each get a boost in revenue if they leave their rates the same. For instance, the fiscal court's revenue would increase from just over $7,000, and the schools would receive just under $30,000.

The library would get an additional $10,000, and the health department about $3,000.

The county fire department would increase about $8,000, and the Extension would increase about $800.

schools and library, but he is obligated to assess property at what it's worth.

"I don't want people to pay more than they are supposed to," Stivers said. "The market is what it is. If a house is like the one beside it but sells for $15,000 to $20,000 less, the first house needs to be reassessed."

The higher assessment of Wild Turkey marks the third time in as many years that the distillery has proved a taxation boon for countywide taxing districts, which includes the fiscal court, schools, health, library, fire and Extension.

The distillery is slated to grow again after announcing a $44 million new bottling facility that should be operating next year.

Stivers said it's unlikely, however, that the additional value will be on next year's assessment because it's unlikely to be operation by Jan. 1, 2013.

Habitat for Humanity dedicates 13th home

By Ben Carlson

Doris Munsey never stopped trying.

For 10 years, the Lawrenceburg woman applied for but didn't get a Habitat for Humanity home, but that changed last week when she was officially welcomed into her new home on Coleman Drive.

Anderson County Habitat for Humanity dedicated the 13th home it has provided June 10.

Munsey said it took a long time to get her own home, but the effort was worth it.

"A friend told me about this and I started signing up every year," Munsey said. "I kept putting in an application for 10 years, but I finally got one."

"I love it."

Christian Academy schools city council on buying real estate

Local Democrats mimic GOP's response to chief justice

Column as I see 'em ... Congratulations go to the folks from the Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg on their purchase of the old Early Childhood Center.

That property continuing to be used for educational purposes is ideal. And what a bargain! The academy made the only bid on the property and will pay just $75,100 for a 45,500 square foot building and nearly 7.5 acres of land in downtown Lawrenceburg.

By comparison, Mayor Edwinna Baker and the Lawrenceburg City Council spent around $100,000 about a year ago to purchase an empty lot 1-acre lot just a short walk up the street, which is now the Lawrenceburg Green.

Let's go through that again. The academy buys a 45,500 square-foot building on a 7.5-acre lot complete with a playground, cafeteria, gymnasium and athletic field for 75 grand. The city buys a 1-acre empty lot and forks over 100 grand.

Hmm. Of course the academy folks had an actual real estate expert doing their bidding, and were able to score a great deal — less than half the appraised value — and used their own, private money.

The city, on the other hand, never bothered to even have the property appraised and used your money.

Being that the academy will have plenty of extra room in its new facility, maybe it could set aside a classroom and invite the mayor and city council to attend a class in Real Estate Buying 101.

Speaking of forks ... It's amazing how quickly political animals will eat one of their own when a member of the herd dares to jump over his or her party's barbed-wire fence.

Following his vote last week to uphold portions Obama Care as constitutional, Chief Justice John Roberts was excoriated by Republicans who thought they had an ace up their sleeves, or at least one in the hole.

They didn't, and have spent the past week doing everything but burning him in effigy in front of the Supreme Court steps.

The blue-blood Republican establishment has no tolerance for a lot of things, but to it going rogue is tantamount to treason.

Don't believe me? Ask Sarah Palin. It's amazing, too, how political cannibalism is by no means confined to our heroes and villains in Washington, DC.

A good local example played itself out over the past year and concluded last Friday morning when Howard Phillips was not reappointed to the Anderson County Board of Elections.

Like Roberts, Phillips strayed from the reservation by voting his conscience — some would say his morals — and approved the closure of some rural voting precincts due to handicap compliance issues.

Statutorily appointed by the local Democrat committee (Republicans get one, too), Phillips served on the board of elections for eight years, and almost certainly would have served another four had he been reappointed.

But voting to close those precincts was akin to Roberts blessing the bulk of Obama Care, which meant Phillips simply had to go.

That decision would be understandable had Phillips openly opposed the Democrat party, campaigned for a Republican or committed some other crime against Democrats.

But he didn't. The man was appointed to serve the county and make decisions to the best of his ability.

His perceived crime? Coming down on the side that figured being disabled is difficult enough without having to struggle getting in and out of a voting precinct — if the person could get in at all.

That hardly rises to the level of treason, unless the party's hierarchy secretly harbors some anti-handicap bias that I'm not aware of.

Which it doesn't. Right?

Speaking of Obama Care, leave it to the Republicans to get the meaning of the Supreme Court decision flat-out wrong.

The day after it was announced, the talking heads were manically depressed but thankful that Obama Care was declared a tax instead of being found constitutional under the Commerce Clause.

In essence, the court's majority concluded that Congress has the power to tax, that Obama Care is a tax, and therefore it's fine.

That's a bit frightening, don't you think? That precedent expands Congress' taxing power many times over, leaving us wide open for all sorts of congressional hi-jinx.

It's no secret that many politicians and their supporters would love to take away or at least severely restrict gun ownership.

What's to prevent them, then, from forgoing another 2nd Amendment fight in court and simply order an annual tax on all firearms? It certainly could be viewed as political suicide, but nothing beyond that would prevent such a move.

Consider, too, that along with mandating a tax, doing so would require that gun owners register their firearms with the IRS, creating the master list of firearms anti-gun zealots so desperately crave, but legislatively have not been able to achieve.

Recycle bins a questionable idea at best

To the editor:

I see the big picture for Anderson County Environmental Committee's recycling program to become not only profitable in terms of the environment and landfill waste management, but at the very least cost-neutral for taxpayers or even become self-sustaining.

As I see it, your plan/wish is to have the majority of Anderson County residents haul their recycling material either to one of these recycle storage sites or to the county road department location verses having one or two well-maintained trucks to pick up all of the free, small recyclable material.

Just how does having all of these vehicles burning high-priced gas that we have to pay for stack up against the cost of fuel for one or two well-maintained trucks?

I don't want to hear that these trucks have to purchase fuel at the same stations as we do, because they don't. The city and county can purchase bulk fuel at a lower cost than the public and if they are not, they are wrong.

The ones in the current recycling program not only have to purchase their own recycling container and label it, they also donate the material to the county, which then sells it. You've said nothing of how much money has been generated through the current recycling program. If funds haven't been generated, why not?

We are purchasing our own recycling bins, give you the materials for free and you want most of us to spend additional money, which most of us don't have, to purchase additional high-cost fuel to haul these materials to one of your planned sites?

As these plans are outlined, they may very well cause not only us but others to reconsider even being a part of the recycling program.

Recycling is a good thing and can be self-sustaining

Remembering the flag

To the editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to a photo and writing project I recently completed.

I had some close friends recommend that I submit the picture with my writing to my hometown newspaper, possibly for publication on the Fourth of July.

Thank you so much for your time and I hope you consider printing my work in your newspaper.

The Flag

He looks at the flag waving in the air, too young to know the meaning it bears.

He looks at the red stripe and all that he sees, is his shiny red fire truck with a small plastic key.

He sees the white stripe and looks up high, at the fluffy white clouds in the bright blue sky.

He looks at the blue and the stars that it holds, reminded of an old mobile shining with stars of gold.

She looks at the flag and sees something more, like all the soldiers and the oath that they swore.

When she looks at the red, what enters her brain, are the troops that shed blood and the ones that remain.

She sees the white and is reminded of stone, of the soldiers of Arlington, who flew swiftly home.

She sees the blue and the stars so precise, and is reminded of the ultimate sacrifice.

So whether through the eyes of a child or of an adult, in the end, there's one conclusive result.

That the American flag represents various things, but in the end one thing remains.

Freedom; to do as we please,

Prepare now for garden-fresh taste this winter

Well, you don't need a calendar to know it's July. The thermometer is telling us it's hotter than a firecracker.

If you do nothing else this week, please wash your cars and leave the windows down at night. Anyone knowing of a rain dance please feel free. We need rain.

Our gardens need 1 inch of rain a week to grow well. The high temperature increases that need.

Though you may be tempted to water more frequently, the plants in the garden do better when given a good soaking once a week. This encourages deep roots, helping the plant to survive dry periods better.

As the harvesting begins, I thought this would be a good time to go over preserving methods. Those of us who preserve food from the garden are breaking out the canners, dehydrators and freezer bags.

Keeping everything as fresh as possible, until you have time to preserve it, is the tricky part.

Berries, beans, beets, corn, onions, peppers, potatoes, squash, and tomatoes can all be preserved in a variety of ways.

Preparation is important if you want it to taste garden fresh in the middle of January.

If you're gathering through the week and preserving on the weekend, storage is important. Store the beans in a paper bag in the refrigerator's crisper drawer. Put the ears of corn in plastic grocery bags and keep them in the refrigerator. Everything else just needs to be kept cool.

Let's start with the root crops. Dig onions, potatoes and beets and then let them dry a few days on newspaper in a cool, dark place. This allows them to cure. Do not wash them. Just knock off the big stuff.

You can then leave them in a cool dark place for the winter.

Cover beets and potatoes with burlap or straw. Whatever kind of container you use, be sure you don't have too many layers. They need a little air.

Leave 1 inch of green tops on the beets, and two inches on the onions. You can also use ladies' nylons to store your onions.

Put one in and then tie a knot before you drop in the next one. Then hang the whole thing in a cool, dark place for the winter.

If you're freezing berries, tomatoes, beans, squash or peppers you need to wash and dry them before you freeze. Slice the tomatoes, squash and peppers, lay them out on a cookie sheet, cover with

Recipes to help make fish part of diet

A healthy diet may include fish at least once a week. While many southern cooks fry fish, there are other ways to prepare it.

salt and pepper.
Heat a large ovenproof sauté pan over medium-high heat; then add the oil and heat through. Be careful not to crowd the pan, place the fish in the pan, non skin-side down. Cook until crisp and golden brown, about two to three minutes. Carefully turn the fish over and cook one minute more.

Transfer the pan to the preheated oven and cook until just cooked through, about one to four minutes more, depending upon the thickness of the fillets. (An instant-read thermometer should register an internal temperature of 135 F in the thickest part of the fillet.)
Remove the fish from the pan, and transfer to warm serving plates. If desired, top with black bean avocado salsa (recipe below.)

Black Bean Avocado Salsa

Makes about 2 1/2 cups
3 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice (about 2 limes)
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
2 tablespoons fresh cilantro - no substitute for this
1/2 teaspoon each salt and fresh ground black pepper, or to taste
1 tablespoon canola oil
1 cup canned black beans, rinsed and drained
1/4 cup finely diced red onion
1 medium ripe red tomato, seeded and finely diced
1 small Serrano chile, stem, ribs and seeds removed, finely diced
1 large ripe avocado
In a small bowl, whisk together the lime juice, cumin, cilantro, salt and pepper; add the oil in a slow, steady stream, whisking constantly and vigorously until wax paper and freeze them for an hour or so.

Then, put the slices in freezer bags and freeze for the winter.
Beans work pretty much the same way, except you don't have to slice them. Snap off the ends of snap beans, wash, dry and then do the cookie sheet thing. Berries should be washed thoroughly, patted dry and then get the cookie sheet treatment.
I can my potatoes, corn, beans and tomatoes. If you've never canned potatoes, let me tell you, it's wonderful. Yes, it's a lot of peeling, but oh so fun when you can just grab a jar off the shelf, heat and eat.
I also dry tomatoes, peppers, and squash in my dehydrator. It takes a long time and uses more energy than I like, but it's the only thing that works with my schedule.
You can use two window screens and the great outdoors. Place the clean and sliced vegetables between the screens, like a sandwich, and put them on a table or something to ensure air circulation.

Put them under some shade for a day or so, depending on the temperature. Don't leave them out overnight.
I also freeze corn, whole and in the husk. Just drop three ears in a gallon freezer bag and put it in the freezer. It takes a lot of room, but when winter rolls around you can get the taste of summer in minutes.
Just pop the ear in the microwave for about 30 seconds. This will allow you to shuck it and cook it however you want.
Now, go check your hoses for leaks. We're in a drought and we certainly can't afford to waste water. Buy some new ones if you need them. They're all on sale now.
Unless we get a reprieve from MotherNature, I think we're going to be spending a lot of time with our hoses this month. Happy growing.

'Hoping' for a 'change' this November

To the editor:
I hope everyone has been enjoying their summer — gee whiz I wish it would warm it up.
The cold of November is fast approaching and Election Day looms.
The Obama Care vote of last week (5-4) was the final straw for me in viewing this president's intentions to mislead and deceive the American people. Obama orchestrated this "tax" document and has shaken this country intending to deceive the American public with a healthcare bill that is dominated by taxation principles.
Each day Obama sets forth his progressive, socialistic agenda — burdening the American people.
This imposter and actor of the presidency continually disrupts and degrades the United States Constitution, including its meaning and its being.

And his "Fast and Furious" other means of coveting the wrongs is causing undue stress upon its citizens.
Put out your left hand and count upon that hand what he has accomplished during his presidency. I thought so.
OK, he rifled out bin Laden in western style, tossed him overboard somewhere into the deep ocean depths where even the sharks looked the other way.
I'll see you at the polls in November with my right hand because you now know the vast importance of your vote.
It is my "hope" that our vote that will "change" what horrific wrongs have been committed by this administration.

CASA volunteer finds her voice for neglected, abused children

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

When Amanda Neff met CASA volunteer Connie Riddell, she assumed Riddell only wanted to hear the same story about her past. Neff was 15. A ward of the state. She had lived in a group home in Indiana, was living in a Frankfort group home with 14 other girls. Neff and her brother were in the middle of an extended custody battle. She repeated the same narrative to the social worker. The attorney. The judge. The probation officer assigned to her case after Neff got physical with her step-mother while living with her father in Indiana. "Kind of thought it was a joke," Neff said about when she first heard about CASA and met Riddell. "You have to understand that when you go through the system, you're over interviewed; you're telling your story over and over again. "It's just another person to tell your story to, another person with their hand in the cookie jar, I guess." Riddell had one question for Neff, a question no one asked before. "After I told my story to her, she had said, 'I know where you've been. Where are you going?'" Neff recalled. And that question made all the difference. Riddell believed in Neff. "For right or wrong, she had my back," Neff said of Riddell. CASA, or Court Appointed Special Advocates, are appointed by judges to be voices for neglected or abused children in court, according to the Franklin and Anderson County CASA's website. Because Neff moved back and forth between Indiana and Kentucky during her adolescence, she was assigned two CASA volunteers — Riddell with the Frankfort office and Susan Jordan in Indiana. Both women gave Neff a sense of stability and a normal life, she said. Riddell went with Neff on her first date with the boy who would later become Neff's husband. Jordan was by Neff's side when she gave birth to her first child, though Neff had already turned 18 and aged out of the CASA program. Both CASA volunteers helped Neff get back on her feet when her mother relapsed and her husband went to prison. "I feel like because of CASA, my kids have a better mother," Neff said. "Without [Riddell], I'm a bazillion times sure I would have been an addict and not a good mother. CASA plays an important part in my home." So when Neff read a newspaper column asking for CASA volunteers in the Frankfort State-Journal in 2009, she knew she wanted to give back. Becoming a CASA volunteer, she said, involved background checks and six to seven weeks of training for about 12 hours a week. Three days after completing training Neff picked her first case, one that mirrored her own troubled experience as a teen. "For me, teenagers are important because we have a shorter amount of time to get their lives together before they're out on their own," Neff, a 27-year-old working mom of four, said. "It's a sense of urgency; they have a special place in my heart." CASA is as much as someone puts into it, she said. Some volunteers visit children once a month; others interact with them every two weeks. Neff works full-time and sometimes juggles two or three cases, depending on what point in the court process the child is in. She currently sits on the board of advisers and says she'll be assisting with training soon. Neff said the No. 1 goal for herself and for CASA is reunification for children and their families. Sometimes the end result isn't the one Neff wants, she said, and that can be frustrating.

"There is a lot on your shoulders — a child's future," Neff, who has worked four cases since 2009, said. "I take it very seriously because this is the rest of their lives. Their lives have been shaken up enough, we want to balance it out as much as possible." Neff said she missed out on many things as a teenager: Prom, high school graduation, a normal home life. Everything she's been through, she said, groomed and prepared her for what she now considers to be her calling with CASA. "If I could be there for one child, then all these years and everything I've done will be worth it," Neff said. "Just one."

creamy and well combined. Set aside. In medium bowl, mix together the beans, onions, tomato, and Serrano chile. Pour the lime juice over the bean mixture, and gently toss to combine. Use gloves to protect your hands when handling hot peppers. If you can't find a Serrano chile, then you can substitute Habanero or jalapeno chiles. Use a little less instead of more. Try 1 tablespoon of finely diced pepper. You will have a slightly different taste depending on what pepper you use. If you leave it out, it will still taste good but not hot. (The salsa can be made through step two and stored up to three days in advance. Just before serving, add the avocado. Toss with the black bean salsa and serve immediately.) If you didn't make the salsa ahead of time, peel, pit and finely dice the avocado; gently toss with the bean mixture to combine.

Cover tightly with plastic wrap, then refrigerate until serving time. It's best if you allow the salsa to sit for 30 minutes to an hour before serving but don't hold for more than a couple hours or the diced avocado will become mushy and discolored.

Just before serving, toss the salsa again; taste and adjust the seasoning as needed with salt and pepper.

Note: Black bean avocado salsa is delicious on any fish, especially on meaty fish such as tuna, salmon or mahi-mahi. It also complements grilled chicken, pork chops or grilled flank steak. It's also great on corn chips.

Thanks to the Viking Cooking School for allowing me to use these recipes. It was a fun school, a bit pricey, but great to have hands on experience with new ways to cook fish.

Local Lincoln Institute grads gather for reunion

Lincoln Institute closed its doors in 1966, but the memories of the school are vivid for those who have been touched by its mission.

Approximately 100 Lincoln graduates and friends gathered Saturday at Eagle Lake Convention Center for a reunion of the Lawrenceburg chapter of the Lincoln Alumni Association.

"Most of the people that were there live in Lawrenceburg or were from Lawrenceburg and attended Lincoln Institute," said Victor Brown, the president of the local chapter.

Brown added that some attendees were friends from other towns who heard about the gathering and wanted to come for an afternoon of fun, reminiscing and a potluck meal.

Brown, a 1959 graduate of the school, said he knew of people who drove from Louisville, Lexington, Carrollton and Sparta for the gathering.

Lincoln Institute was a high school for African-Americans located near Simpsonville in Shelby County. The school, which operated during a time of segregation, was founded in 1911 by Berea College.

The school's first graduating class was in 1912.

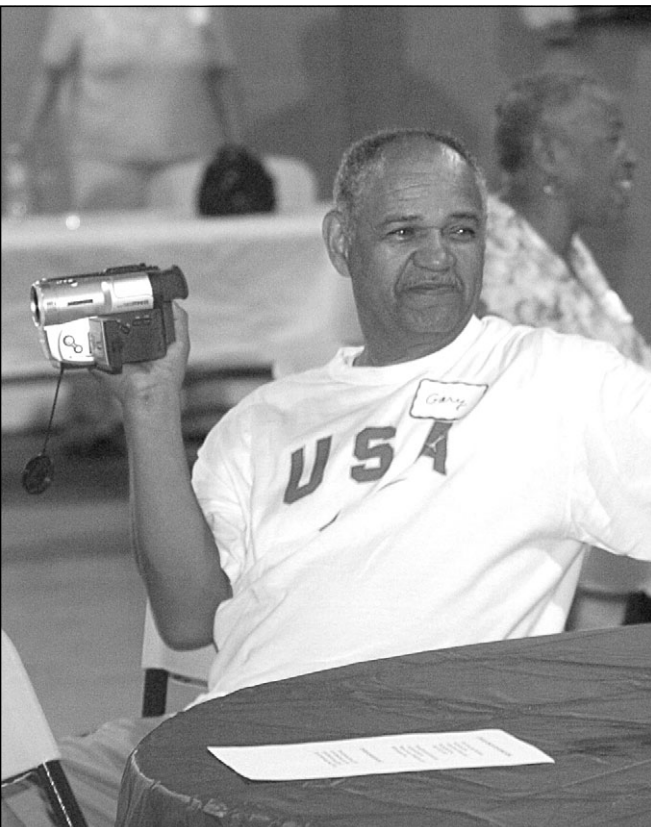

Lincoln Institute served young people from all over Kentucky and surrounding states, providing a rigorous education.

Graduates from all over will gather at the school campus, which now houses the Whitney Young Job Corps Center, and at the Galt House in Louisville for another reunion Aug. 3-5, Brown said.

andler's co-MVP, Rep. Cedric Richmond (D-La.). The game set a new record and raised about $250,000 for local charities, according to a news release. Wearing a uniform from Berea College, Chandler started at shortstop and played all seven innings of the game. He finished the night with three hits, a walk, three stolen bases, four runs batted in (RBI), and one perfectly placed bunt. "On one of the most politically charged days in recent memory, it was great to end the day with a bit of bipartisan fun for a good cause," Chandler said in a news release. Kentucky was well-represented at the game, as Congressman John Yarmuth and Sen. Rand Paul also played for the Democrats and Republicans respectively. Chandler threw out Sen. Paul on a close play at first base in the first inning.

From staff reports
The Anderson County Community Medical Clinic a charitable health organization, was awarded a $500 community grant by the Walmart Foundation, according to the clinic's press release. The grant was made possible by the company's Local Community Contribution/Hunger Outreach Grant Program through the Lawrenceburg Walmart. The clinic initiative is part of the Anderson County Community of Promise, and the work of its health and nutrition committee. The clinic will soon begin operation at 1111 Industry Road in Lawrenceburg. As the county's only free medical facility, it will provide clinical services by physicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, registered nurses and/or licensed nurses, along with citizen volunteers. Medical care will be given to qualified patients who are 18 years of age or older, cannot afford medical insurance and are not eligible to receive health benefits from state or federal programs. The clinic will provide chronic care services for such medical conditions as hypertension, diabetes, muscular or skeletal pain, and high cholesterol. Collaboration with other local entities is a priority for the medical facility, a non-profit organization, organizers said. Supporters of the clinic's work have made a strategic investment to improve the quality of life for Anderson County's needy adults and are seeking donations from businesses and citizens for operation of the clinic. Fundraisers will be held during the remainder of the year with a "Wishes for Wellness" Garden Party planned for Aug. 7, 6-8 p.m., to be held at Lawrenceburg United Methodist Church. During the event, monetary donations or items to assist with the clinic's operation will be greatly appreciated. Lessons learned in belly of the great fish

This week I want to revisit the tale of Jonah and the whale.

The story of Jonah, God's prophet, is told by God: "Go to the great city of Ninevah and preach against it, because its wickedness has come up before me." Jonah 1:2.

Ninevah was the capital of Assyria and very much a hated enemy of Israel. Jonah knew God was capable of forgiving the Ninevites, and this made him not want to do what God commanded.

I guess a modern day example might be Christians going to an extremist Muslim country to try and spread God's word. Well, as we all know, God sent a "great fish" to swallow Jonah for three days. From the belly of a fish at the bottom of the ocean Jonah called out to God saying, "But I with a song of thanksgiving will sacrifice to you. What I have vowed I will make good. Salvation comes from the Lord." Jonah 2:9.

The fish released Jonah onto dry land and he did as God commanded. Jonah warned the Ninevites of God's impending wrath and they turned from their sinful ways.

God did not destroy them.

There are so many different lessons we can glean from this short and simple story.

First, as our lord Jesus Christ commands you and me, we are to go to the unreached and tell of God's word.

Jonah didn't want to go, but God had very different plans.

Second, we must obey God's commands no matter how difficult they may be, or even if our pride stands in our way.

Third, we must love and pray for those that are evil. Think of someone in your life who you desperately dislike and pray for him or her. Or perhaps pray for non-Christians, or those who have never heard the good news.

Fourth, praise God for his divine grace and ability to forgive.

God spared Jonah who directly disobeyed him. God spared the Ninevites, who undoubtedly sinned grievously.

Don't we often disobey our God? We must turn to him, honor him and obey him.

Jonah is a simple story with a lot of lessons to be learned. The final lesson is we can't escape God's will for our lives. We may think we are doing pretty good on our own, but if you are truly a child of God, you will answer to a higher authority, and God can take any means necessary to get our attention.

DEATH OF THE UNBORN

There is something wrong with this nation when you can legally kill (abortion) your child and nothing happens to you, but if you discipline them you can go to jail. You can end up in all kinds of trouble if you disturb the eggs of an American Bald Eagle or if you bother the nest of a Sea Turtles, but abort a child and there are very few protest.

Recently, I heard in the news of someone being found guilty of 2nd degree murder in the death of an unborn child. It seems that this person had killed a pregnant woman. Now, how can that be criminal, when 50 million babies have been aborted in America? If anything, due to it being premeditated, if that is 2nd degree murder, should not abortion be murder in the 1st degree! If not, why not?

Women and young girls who allow doctors to abort their babies are assisting in the murder of a life. Life begins at conception (when the seed of woman and the sperm of man comes together) and when one willfully abort an unborn child we are killing A PERSON. I read not long ago, "Abortion doesn't make you un-pregnant, it makes you a mother of a murdered baby." The baby in the womb of the mother is not just a part of the woman's body it is a person, made in the image of God (Genesis 1:26-27). It is sad when a baby cannot be safe in its own mother's womb.

Anderson News sports editor John Herndon is sad after last Wednesday's game at Great American Ball Park. He was pouting because the night before he had seen Bronson Arroyo come within five outs of a no-hitter, then on Wednesday, the Brewers ended his personal 10-game winning streak of Reds' games he had seen live.

It's never a bad day at the ball park

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

CINCINNATI - What I love most about baseball is that you never really know what you are going to get when you go to the ball park.

Such was the case last Tuesday when my wife and I journeyed up to Cincinnati for our annual two-game excursion at Great American Ball Park.

The Reds were hosting the Milwaukee Brewers in a game that could have had some major ramifications in the National League Central Division race.

With tough-luck pitcher Bronson Arroyo on the hill for Cincinnati, you had to think the Reds would be in the game and would have a chance to win late against Milwaukee's Marco Estrada.

About the only history imaginable before the game would be Joey Votto smacking three home runs or something along that line.

Possible pitching history? Uh, nothing more than seeing Tom Seaver's Reds' jersey in the Reds' Hall of Fame before the game.

But there we were, perched in the mezzanine level over third base watching the soft-throwing right-hander mow down the Brewers inning after inning. Hey, I keep score at games so we knew the possible no-hitter was in the works.

Suffice it to say I am glad I did not have Marty or Thom Brennaman's job last Tuesday. The oldest of the unwritten baseball rules is that you say nothing about a no-hitter when one is working. But the job of a play-by-play man is to inform the listeners or viewers of what is going on at the time. They did.

In the stands, there was no way I was about to say the words, but when Arroyo took the mound in the eighth inning, I got my cell phone out to try to get a picture. After all, the meat of the Brewers' batting order would not be due up again and you had to think the no-no was in sight.

After Arroyo gave up a one-out walk, Milwaukee's Taylor Green, a guy hitting .208, stepped to the plate. On a 1-2 pitch, he lined one down the right field line, falling about six inches fair. No no-hitter.

Baseball really is a funny game. Nine pitches later, it was no shutout and no decision as the Reds' 3-0 lead was a 3-3 tie and Sean Marshall came on to get the final out of the inning.

And something I dream of seeing fell by the wayside again. I have seen no-hitters, even perfect games, at the high school level and they are rare.

But despite seeing hundreds of big league games over the years, a no-hitter is still on my want-to-see list. It is that random. There has to be a hot pitcher, some great defense behind him and a little bit of luck for one to come about.

(Actually, it was not my closest flirtation with a major league no-hitter. Back in 1984, I was there when Reds' great Mario Soto was one strike - one measly strike! - from one when the Cardinals' George Hendrick put one into orbit for a home run.)

Riley advances to State Am quarters

Already looking ahead to 2013 event

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Kaitlyn Riley had no idea what to expect at the women's State Am golf tournament last week. But now she knows she wants more.

Much more. The Anderson County High School junior might have put together the best four days of her young career last week when she advanced to the quarter-final round of the match-play tournament, held at Elizabethtown Country Club.

Not bad for someone who had never played the 5,603-yard, par-72 course and had never participated in a match-play tournament before.

"I was thinking if I just made the championship flight, that would be good enough for me," Riley said with a smile.

Shooting a 77 in the qualifying round last Monday, Riley easily made the cut of the top 32 golfers, then moved into what turned out to be a grueling basketball-like elimination tournament that finds golfers competing head-to-head with the winner determined by number of holes won rather than the lowest number of strokes.

"Laurie Goodlett really helped me with the rules and what to expect," Riley said of the Lawrenceburg golfer who has won two State Am titles.

Along the way, Riley scored her first-ever hole-in-one and defeated one of Kentucky's best-known female golfers before going out in the round of eight against Elizabethtown's Lauren Hartlage, who was playing on her home course.

Hartlage had a five-hole lead with four to play when the match stopped.

Hartlage, who will be a freshman at Elizabethtown High School, moved on to the semi-final before losing to eventual champ Karisa Akin, also of Elizabethtown.

While Riley was not happy with her play last Thursday morning, it was her upset of North Hardin

Establish clover plots to improve hunting areas

By Art Lander, Jr.

Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

Establishing small plots of clover throughout your hunting area can pay big dividends during deer and wild turkey seasons.

Summer is a good time to start preparations for an initial planting in the fall.

"If managed correctly, stands of clover can last for three to five years without re-seeding," said Chris Grascch, a private lands biologist who works in the Bluegrass Region for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "Plots can be as small as 1/4- to 1/2-acre in size and should be located where there's full sun at least part of the day."

Clover needs to be mowed periodically, at least once a year, and doesn't thrive in shady areas. This perennial cool-season legume helps increase soil fertility and provides an almost year-round source of high quality forage for deer. Clover starts growing in the early spring and lasts until it is killed back by the heaviest frosts of late fall.

The first step in this habitat improvement project is to find the right area to establish a plot and prepare the soil for planting.

Secluded woods openings are especially attractive to deer because they feel safe feeding there in the late afternoons, offering good opportunities for close shots.

One option is to locate the plot at the edge of a field or existing opening that deer are already using. Make sure your tree stand or ground blind can be located within easy shooting range.

A second option, which is especially

County building new football field at park

By John Herndon
Sports editor

Anderson County will soon be the home of a new football field. This one will be serving the youth leagues of Anderson County.

"It is something that has been talked about for as long as I can remember," Anderson County Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway said last week.

The new field, currently under construction near the soccer fields at Anderson County Community Park, will give the youth football leagues a home of their own when completed. The league currently plays games behind the old Early Childhood Center, where there are no goalposts and no permanent scoreboard.

The league has also played games at Anderson County High School in the past.

The new field is expected to be ready for play for the 2013 season. "There is no way it will be operational this year," Conway said.

Conway said the new field will need to be seeded, with county extension agent Tommy Yankey making recommendations and will be regulation size. "It will have goalposts, a scoreboard and bleachers," Conway said.

Much of the work on building the new field is being donated, Conway said. "We were fortunate enough that we had fill dirt donated from the new Farm Bureau building," Conway said. "Mike Gay donated a bulldozer. Eddie Carey donated a dozer. Wayne Supply donated a dozer. Eddie ran one, one of his men ran one and Billy Powell ran one."

Conway added that Carey paid for the dirt hauling with proceeds from truck and tractor pulls held at the park.

The new field will be the home to all youth league games but parks and recreation director Nick Satterly said he envisions some of the existing football fields to still be utilized to save on wear at the new field.

"I would still like to see some of the practices at the schools," Satterly said.

Gillis makes championship flight at state

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County resident Taylor Gillis found the third time really was a bit of a charm at the women's State Am golf tournament last week at Elizabethtown. Gillis, who now plays golf for the University of the Cumberland, shot a 7-over 79 in the qualifying round, good enough to earn a berth in the championship flight of the top 32 scores at the Elizabethtown Country Club. But in the match-play championship bracket, Gillis ran into some tough luck.

"This was my third time playing in the State Am," Gillis said,

"however, it was my first time ever competing in the championship flight.

"On Monday, I was happy with how I played, especially since I was 6-over on the front nine and then made the turn to shoot a 1-over for 79, which, thankfully, was good enough to qualify me for the championship flight."

When Gillis got to the championship bracket, she ran into eventual semi-finalist Lauren Hartlage, a golfer at Elizabethtown High School who was playing on her home course. Hartlage ended up winning 4-and-2 to advance.

"I wasn't happy with how I played," Gillis said. "However,

I was able to cut the match to being down one after nine (holes) and would end up losing on 16."

Wednesday, Megan Foley, who recently graduated from Transylvania University, scored a 3-and-2 win over Gillis.

"I cut the match to being down one with six holes to go, but ended up getting beat on 16."

Still, Gillis believes the State Am helped her game.

"Overall, it was a fun experience getting to see my teammates and other friends I have made over the years."

Goodlett falters at State Am golf tournament

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Laurie Goodlett knew what the competition was at the women's State Am golf tournament last week. After all, the former Anderson County High School and University of Kentucky golfer had won the event twice in the 1990s.

But at the Elizabethtown Country Club last Monday, Goodlett shot a 12-over 83 in the qualifying round of the tournament, putting her in the first flight, one of the consolation brackets of the prestigious tournament.

"I was disappointed with my qualifying round of 83 after having shot a 73 during the (Lady Bug) Invitational on (the previous) Saturday," Goodlett said. "However, I can't be very upset since I really haven't been playing much competitive golf for the last three or four years."

Goodlett found out that the consistency that once made her one of Kentucky's best golfers has not completely returned as she was 10 strokes off what she had shot on the same course two days before.

In match play, Goodlett defeated Sabrina Ferreri, 3 and 2, but lost to Jill Edgington, 1-up, in the second round.

"I shot a 76 and (Edgington) shot a 73," Goodlett said. "She was a young girl, Kaitlyn Riley's age, who was a great player. Her short game was impressive. Usually, the young players have plenty of length but aren't as sharp with their short game. This young lady had both, at least on Wednesday."

Goodlett said she plans to continue playing more this summer.

Volleyball clinic held at high school

From staff reports

The Anderson County Lady Bearcat Volleyball Clinic was held on June 23 at the school. The one-day all-skills camp focused on intensive group and individual drills in all phases of volleyball. Lady Bearcat coaches Courtney DeLong and Bobby Hardin provided specialized instruction during the day. The freshman, junior varsity and varsity teams helped facilitate the drills and worked one-on-one with each camper on volleyball fundamentals such as serving, passing, setting, blocking and both offensive and defensive techniques.

The campers will be recognized when the Lady Bearcats open the home season on Aug. 9 against George Rogers Clark.

senior Lydia Gumm, who has committed to play at Florida State and is a two-time state high school tournament runner-up, that raised plenty of eyebrows.

Gumm, considered a favorite to win the state's Miss Golf this fall, has placed in the top four at the state championship in each of the last four years. Riley knew about the star, who had shot a 68 in the qualifying round.

But in the Sweet 16, Riley got the victory when Gumm conceded the 17th hole, leaving Riley with a two-hole lead and only one to play.

Along the way, Riley turned in the shot of the tournament, aching the 187-yard 13th hole. Riley used a 3-wood, then watched as her tee shot sliced through a cross wind, hit the green, then rolled to the cup.

"My brother (Dylan Riley, who was acting as Kaitlyn's caddy) started yelling cut, cut," Riley smiled. "I turned and looked at (Gumm) and she was shocked."

Riley had teed off first on the hole, meaning she had to wait for Gumm's tee shot before claiming the hole. Gumm's drive missed the green.

Ironically, Riley and Gumm had both double bogeyed on No. 12.

Riley still had to hold off Gumm's challenge, but eventually prevailed. Riley said Gumm was the best she has ever beaten. "By far," Riley said. "I was pretty excited. That is why you go to the State Am. You want to play the best."

Riley said the Elizabethtown course was not overly difficult but "the greens were really hard."

In Tuesday's opening match, Riley scored an impressive 4-and-3 win over Olivia Cason, a rising sophomore at Owensboro Catholic. "I played pretty well,"

Riley said. "I was putting well."

Still Riley did not feel comfortable until the 15th hole, when Cason, needing a win to prolong the match, could only tie.

Ironically, Riley did not record a birdie against Cason. "I had a lot of pars that day," she said.

In the quarterfinal against Hartlage, Riley simply felt her game left her.

"I played awful," she said. "I just don't think it was my day. That was four days of golf and you do get tired."

It did not help that Hartlage, whose mother, Kim, is the longtime coach at Elizabethtown High School, enjoyed the home-course advantage. "She knew where to hit the shots and she knew the greens," Riley said.

But even with the loss, Riley said she is looking ahead. "I am excited about next year already," she said.

"She can play with the best" Dylan Riley said. "She proved to everyone else that she can play with the best."

After bowing out of her first State Am, Riley and her brother returned to Lawrenceburg, where they hit the links at Wild Turkey Trace. They also beat the heat with an early morning round at the local course on Friday.

Riley had gotten off to a hot start in the Pepsi Tour, winning all three events she entered before deciding to concentrate on the State Am. She still ranks sixth on that circuit despite playing in only three events. She was scheduled to return to the tour at the State Junior Am on Monday and Tuesday at Maywood in Bardstown.

Riley is still looking for a big finish in the high school season this fall but has added the 2013 State Am to her schedule.

"It was fun," Riley said. "I can't wait until next year."

10- and 11-year-old team will be playing Eastern National at 1 p.m.

HERNDON

maybe the most unpredictable game of all continued when the Reds' Drew Stubbs hit the eventual game-winning home run in the bottom of the eighth, then closer Aroldis Chapman, the "Cuban Missile" who had been having his own crisis in his previous four outings, came in and struck out the side, then turned a celebratory somersault.

Even though the Brewers came back to win 8-4 last Wednesday afternoon, breaking my personal 10-game Reds' winning streak of games seen in person, it was a trip to remember. The Reds are still atop the division standings and seem to have a favorable second-half schedule. My wife even high-fived me after Stubbs' home run - what more can a man ask for?

After all, no matter what happens, it is never a bad day when you are at the ball park.

HUNTING

important for bow hunting deer, is creating a wildlife opening between heavy cover, where deer are known to bed, and the travel routes they take through adjacent woodlands.

Pick a level spot with decent soil fertility. Old fields covered with weeds, brush or small trees can be cleared using hand tools, a chainsaw or mower. A tiller can also be used to prepare the area for planting.

If the area is covered with fescue, Grascch recommends using herbicide to kill back the tall grass. A chemical-free option is solarization, which uses the heat of the sun to kill the grass, vegetation or weed seeds in the soil. On a sunny summer day, place sheets of clear plastic on the ground and weigh them down with rocks on each corner. The extreme heat that develops under the plastic will kill grass and weeds down to their roots in a few days.

Conduct a soil test to measure the nutrient levels -- nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P), and potassium (K) -- and pH level (acidity) of the soil. Soil test kits are available at most farm stores. Follow directions carefully.

Consider using 10-10-10, a formulation commonly available in 50-pound bags, if fertilizer needs to be added to your plot. Lime improves water penetration and the uptake of nutrients to plants growing in acidic soils.

Winter wheat is a good choice for an initial planting in the fall because it's high protein, is easily digestible by wildlife and makes a good nurse crop for clover. It grows best when the soil has a pH of 5.8 to 6.5.

"Winter wheat should be planted from Aug. 15 to Oct. 15 and you might try mixing in some clover seed," said Grascch. "I recommend planting ladino (white) with some medium red clover."

Clover can also be planted the following year in February or early March.

Seed can be spread on a cover of light snow, or in advance of light rain or snow.

Use these long summer days to plant a patch of clover and improve your deer hunting in the fall.

That's how many Kentuckians, on average, read each copy of a newspaper.

You see, one reads it, then passes it on.

Then another reads it and passes it on.

And so forth.

So if you're trying to reach Kentuckians, advertise in the newspaper.

Pass it on.

It's all right here. In the newspaper.

This fact brought to you by the Kentucky Press Association and its 162 member newspapers.
